Buyers Remorse

Buyers remorse is the sense of disappointment people sometimes have after buying an expensive item.

Sometimes we convince ourselves we need something, like the latest video game or new sneakers, only to find out later that we didn't really need it.

Shopping Scenario #1

You want to buy a PS5. A salesperson tells you a newer model is coming out soon. One of your friends have this PS5 you want, and the salesperson says it has problems. What should you do?

A. Wait for the new model

B. Buy this model now

Shopping Scenario #2

- you see really trendy and expensive shoes you want to buy. Your mom won't let you because they are pricey, and she knows they'll go out of fashion soon. But you get money from your aunt to buy the shoes. Do you buy them anyway? Or save your money for something else?
 - A. Buy them, that's why your aunt gave you the money.
 - B. Save the money for something else— Mom is probably right, they'll go out of style soon

Make a Plan

Make a list of your needs and wants.

Think about whether each item is a need or a want, and what each costs.

Think about how each item will help you or make you feel.

Discuss the items with your parents/guardian.

Decide which item or items you will plan to buy.

Do you already have enough money? If not, how will you earn more?

Examples

Needs

- Electric
- food

Wants

- Nike Sneaker
- Video game
